

In an interview today with Boston's NPR News station (WBUR-FM), Rep. Price discussed the politics and policy behind presidential primary scheduling. Rep. Price, who taught political science at Duke University before being elected to Congress, previously served as a co-chair of the Democratic National Committee's Commission on Presidential Nomination Timing and Scheduling.